WHAT DO SPORTSPEOPLE DO IN THEIR FREE TIME? HERE'S HOW THE WORLD'S BEST ATHLETES SPEND THEIR DAYS WHEN THEY ARE NOT TRAINING.

Have you ever wondered what the world's most talented sportspeople do in their free time, when they are not getting ready for probably the most important sports event in their lives? Training for the Olympics means years of regular exercise, healthy food (no takeaways!) and lots of positive thinking. But athletes aren't only interested in getting gold medals.

So what do they really do when they are not training? Most of them try to rest after their workouts and they sleep a minimum of seven to eight hours a night. However, some athletes do not find time for it. Serena Williams, the world's most successful tennis player, says she's got too much energy to go to sleep so she goes to social media. It is not surprising that a lot of athletes do many physical activities in their free time. Swimmer Michael Phelps says he enjoys golf in his free time. Greg Billington, who represented the United States in the triathlon at the Rio games in 2016, likes ballroom dancing! British runner Mo Farah always wanted to be a footballer so he loves watching it and he often goes swimming, just for fun. Sometimes their hobbies can surprise you. For example, the fastest man ever Usain Bolt loves to redecorate his house in Jamaica. But how does he find time to do it if he gets up at ten a.m.?

Here are some other less popular hobbies Olympians have. For instance, Anita Wlodarczyk, an athlete from Poland, enjoys doing simple things in her house like doing housework and cooking traditional meals: pasta and meat dishes. The Olympic Games only take place once every four years, and sportspeople do not get any money for taking part in the games. If they are not very famous, they probably have a full-time job they go back to when the Olympic Games are over. For example, athlete Gwen Jorgensen works as an accountant and Olaf Tufte is a fireman and a farmer. The lifestyle of Olympic sportspeople is never the same, and their hobbies are individual too. Now try to be an Olympian and get back to your day job.
